Lexington avenue, at 9.30 o'clock this morning, white the driver was delivering milk. The horse took fright at some workmen engaged on the Lexington avenue cable, and started on a run down the sidewalk. A deep trench dug along the street prevented him leaving the walk. The wheel of the wagon collided with a hydrant and tore it from its fastenings. The wagon then came in contact with a tree, which withstood the shock, smashing the wagon into fragments. With part of the broken wagon still dangling at his heels, the horse continued to the Elast River before being captured. Several persons narrowly escaped being run down.
